25X1A9a I have known [redacted] and his work since 1946 when he was Chief of the Territorial Studies Unit in the Department of State preparing analyses and reports on boundaries and territorial disputes. He continued as Chief of that activity in CIA until 1954 when he became Chief of the Europe Branch, Geography Division, where he has engaged in geographic research as well as supervised other professional geographers.

25X1A9a [redacted] as a researcher and supervisor, has done an excellent job. His work has always been of top quality, including a depth and breadth of interpretation not achieved by many. He writes well, is able to express his thoughts with ease and to the point. He has a background of knowledge of European countries that would serve him well in teaching. He is not afraid or reluctant to undertake difficult research assignments and is able to bring work to a meaningful conclusion on time.

I fully recommend him for a teaching position with your University.
